Scranton Asks Sweeping Changes In First Message To Legislature

Terms Revamping 'Great Adventure'

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton asked the legislature Tuesday to join him in a "great adventure" revamping state government and its laws.

Scranton's sweeping program was met with enthusiasm by most Democrats, who claimed the governor's legislative program as their own. Republican legislators gave reserved—almost cool—support to the administration blueprint.

"He sounds like a Democrat to me," said a smiling Sen. William J. Lane, D-Washington, Democrat whip.

"Very revolutionary," said Sen. George N. Wade, R-Cumberland. "Very challenging," said Sen. James Berger, GOP floor leader.

The comments of the lawmakers were typical of their respective parties.

Numerous proposals in a 22-minute address unpunctuated by applause, Scranton proposed:

—legislation for a referendum of the people to decide whether a constitutional convention should be held to rewrite the state's 88-year-old basic law. There is a "crying need for constitutional revision," the governor said. "This is a must for Pennsylvania."

—establishment of four new governmental agencies; a separate department of mental health; a council of human services; a department of community development; and a commission of professional affairs to supervise the state's professional licensing agencies.

—expanded provisions for medical care for the aged under the Kerr-Mills law, including: increased limits on assets that may be owned by a patient treated under the program; elimination of state liens against property to cover medical bills; determination of state aid eligibility in advance.

Civil Service —a uniform civil service act that would cover virtually the entire state government to replace what Scranton termed a "bewildering hodge-podge of inconsistent statutory and executive programs."

—broad reform of the state's bituminous mining laws, including: transfer of authority over strip mine law regulation from the mines department to the forest and waters department; increased bond posted by mine operators; greater degree of backfilling than now required; limit the time during which a strip mine could remain open.

—further enactment of a state constitutional amendment authorizing financing of the so-called Project 70, a long range plan for park development that will cost $70 million.

—legislative reapportionment, but said "this is primarily a matter for the legislature itself."

The governor also proposed that laws be enacted to implement the long-pending consolidation of city and county offices in Philadelphia; boost blind veterans' pensions by $50 a month; tightening harness racing regulations.

The governor deferred detailed discussion of finance, education and industrial development until later. He said he planned to present messages to the legislature on each of those matters within the next six weeks.

However, in education he urged prompt enactment by the lawmakers of a one-year moratorium on the effective dates of the controversial 1961 school district reorganization law which would merge the state's present 2,100 districts into some 300.

He also urged prompt enactment of a law establishing a State Board of Education to take over educational policy making from the Department of Public Instruction. The board would replace the present State Council of Education which is a quasi-policy-making agency.

The governor's address was the high point of the legislative day. Shortly after he spoke to the joint session the lawmakers adjourned until Monday.

In other action, the Senate confirmed two more of Scranton's cabinet appointments. They were John K. Tubor as secretary of commerce and Richard M. Hornbeck, as secretary of property and supplies. The Democrats supplied the necessary votes to give the Republicans the two-thirds margin needed for confirmation.

Cabinet Posts Are Approved

HARRISBURG (AP)—The Senate confirmed two more of Gov. Scranton's cabinet appointees Tuesday and received three bills promised in his election campaign.

Unanimously approved by the Senate were Pittsburghers John K. Tubor, 41-year-old attorney, as commerce secretary, and Richard M. Hornbeck, 62-year-old businessman, as secretary of property and supplies.

Tubor was sworn in a short time later. Hornbeck will take the oath in the next few days.

Only two more cabinet appointments remained to be approved. They are E. Wilson Purdy of St. Petersburg, Fla., as police commissioner and H. Beecher Charnbury of State College as mines secretary.

The 23-member Democratic caucus has withheld the eight votes the 26-man GOP delegation needs to confirm the two men. Democratic sources said Charnbury would be approved next week. Purdy may be delayed longer because of alleged resentment that he is from out of state.

The major administration bill offered would amend the state constitution to permit the sale of $70 million in bonds for long range park and recreational improvements. The program, known as Project 70, was originally proposed by the Lawrence administration and picked up as part of the platform of both political parties.

BOOBY-TRAPPED BRIDGE CLEARED — Indian engineers of the U.N. force advancing on Katanga paused to remove four tons of explosives from the 400-yard-long bridge over the Lualaba River, on the road to President Moise Tshombe's last Katanga Province stronghold. Hopes Raised For N-Test Ban In East-West Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new round of East-West nuclear test-ban talks got under way Tuesday accompanied by a White House adviser's prediction that agreement is "within shooting distance."

The prediction came from presidential science adviser Jerome B. Wiesner in a (Voice of America) radio interview. The script was released as U.S. disarmament chief William C. Foster, Soviet disarmament negotiator Semyon K. Tsarapkin, and British Ambassador David Ormsy Gore met at the State Department for another try at an accord.

Wiesner based his hope on Premier Khrushchev's recent renewal of Soviet acceptance of the principle of on-site inspections to police a treaty outlawing nuclear explosions.

Inspection Issue —The West says such checks inside the Soviet Union are necessary for a workable agreement. The Reds have opposed them as espionage.

Wiesner said the real issue now is the gap between the yearly number of inspections which Khrushchev offered—two or three—and the U.S. demand, which has been 8 or 10.

"I am sure," Wiesner said, "that this is a gap which can be closed by continued negotiations, and we hope that in the next few months we will see the gap closed."

Other U.S. authorities mixed reservations with any optimism. They noted a wide range of other issues remain to be solved in the East-West negotiations which have been going on in one form or another since 1958.

State Department press officer Lincoln White touched on one of the issues when he was asked about Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's statement Monday that France must be included in a test-ban pact.

White noted that the treaty proposed by the United States calls on the signatories "to cooperate in encouraging other states to participate."

But he said the U.S. focus now is on seeking agreement among the atomic big three—the United States, Soviet Union, and Britain. The State Department spokesman said the United States certainly "would try to bring in France," now vigorously pursuing independent atomic development, if an agreement is reached.

By the same token we would undertake to urge that the Russians bring in their Red Chinese colleagues, he said.

U.S. authorities suggested that Gromyko was fortifying the Soviet bargaining and propaganda position by restating Moscow's insistence on such participation. Gromyko did not mention Red China, which is also reported to be working on atomic force.

U.S. officials noted that under the American proposal, no nation signing the treaty would remain bound by the ban if any other country—in or out of the treaty—set off a nuclear explosion.

Seek End Of Strike:

N. Y. Shippers In Accord On Terms

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Shipping Association Tuesday reluctantly accepted government-outlined terms for ending a month-old dock strike, longest and costliest in Atlantic maritime history. Losses to the industry alone were nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars.

In Washington, President Kennedy expressed gratification and a hope that other East and Gulf Coast employers quickly will fall in line with the peace proposal to ensure a quick resumption of shipping.

Kennedy appointed a three-man mediation board, headed by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., that worked out a 37 cents an hour settlement formula last Sunday. Although the panel's findings were not binding, the President indicated he would ask for legislative action if they were ignored.

Now, said presidential press secretary Pierre Salinger, Kennedy is hopeful he can report to Congress "the simple fact that the strike is over."

The National Association of Manufacturers, in its official publication, called the peace formula "a bare-knuckled display of government power unsanctioned by law, the direct imposition of a settlement of the Longshoremen strike."

The striking AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association already had accepted the governmental peace terms, subject to ratification by its membership.

Dockers from Maine to Virginia will vote on the peace pact Wednesday and Thursday, with a return to work in these ports possible by Friday.

However, the vote of New York employers was not unanimous and underlined concern in Washington that shipping companies in Southern Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports might refuse to go along with the Northern ports on the settlement.

$700 Million Lost

The 31-day strike has idled nearly 100,000 persons, including the 60,000 striking longshoremen—tied up 610 ships and cost more than $700 million, by estimate of the shipping association.

The settlement figure originally was assessed in shipping circles here as 39 cents over a two-year period. However, Morse said it amounts to 37 cents an hour, including 4 cents in wages over the two-year span of the contract.

The I.L.A. sought a 50-cent hourly increase package over the period, with 26 cents in wages. The industry offered a 22-cent package for two years. Dock wages had been averaging from $2.96 to $3.02 an hour.

The bitter question of cutting per work gangs because of automation was shelved midway through the strike for later consideration. Morse's proposal called for a study of the problem and hearings by a neutral board if no solid agreement is reached.

Air Force, Space Agency Agree On Joint Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force and space agency agreed Monday to cooperate in jointly seeking both military and civilian goals under the Gemini space program. Involved are two-man orbital flights that could include inspection of hostile satellites and ground areas.

The written agreement, announced by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the Defense Department, assures the Air Force of a role in the manned exploration of space.

Air Force pilots will participate in some of the Gemini flights, which emphasize rendezvous of space vehicles.

NASA and the Air Force have been at odds on some portions of the nation's man-in-space effort. Tuesday's announcement pledged the "most effective utilization" of the Gemini program in eliminating duplication and meeting the requirements of both military and civilian scientists.

Military Interest —The military is particularly concerned with rendezvous techniques because of their application to inspection of hostile satellites, as well as using manned satellites for inspecting ground areas of military significance.

Under the agreement, NASA is authorized to take charge of and use an expanded 87,000-acre area of Merritt Island, near its Cape Canaveral installations, for launching very large space vehicles. These included the advanced Saturn rocket being developed to send an Apollo spacecraft to the moon.

The Air Force also is continued as the manager of the Atlantic Missile Range, which extends to the Indian Ocean, and as host agency at the 15,000-acre Canaveral launch area.

Responsibility Outlined

Each will be responsible for its own service and administration while the Air Force remains responsible for scheduling and frequency of flights, sea surveillance, operation of down-range stations and recovery of vehicles from the ocean.

The Gemini program, which takes up where the older and simpler Mercury program leaves off, is expected to involve about 15 booster vehicles, a dozen spacecraft and an eventual $350-million expenditure. However, an official said he doubted more than $30 million would be used in the first year.

Air Force pilots who participate will not shift to NASA's jurisdiction as did those Air Force pilots who participate in the Mercury program.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara was reported considering Tuesday's agreement a "highly significant and important" action.

K Leaves Berlin As Red Congress Ends

BERLIN (AP) — Premier Khrushchev left Berlin by train Tuesday night after an eight-day visit to the East German Communist party congress.

Wu Hsiu-chuan, the Chinese Communist delegate, and the North Korean delegation, left earlier by plane.

The congress was marked by a sharpening of the Soviet-Red Chinese clash for leadership of the world Communist movement. Both Khrushchev and Wu proposed that the disagreement be fought out in private, but neither took his own advice.

With Khrushchev at the railroad station was Walter Ulbricht, who was re-elected first secretary of the East German party at Tuesday's concluding session.

In a farewell speech, Ulbricht said Khrushchev's visit had

Sign Cooperation Treaty:

Adenauer, DeG Bury National Differences

PARIS (AP)—France and West Germany, long hereditary enemies, Tuesday signed a sweeping treaty of cooperation designed to bind them into lasting friendship and help promote a united Europe. Their leaders hailed it with raptures.

President Charles de Gaulle, Premier Georges Pompidou and Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville signed for France and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and Foreign Minister Gerhard Schröder for West Germany in the Napoleonic Murat Salon of the Elysee Palace.

De Gaulle and Adenauer rose at the end of the 10-minute ceremony and kissed one another on the cheek in Continental fashion, putting the seal of reconciliation on centuries of conflict between their peoples.

Crowning Achievement

For the chancellor, still alert and erect at 87, it was a proud moment. Due to retire from power next fall, he is known to regard French-German partnership as the crowning achievement of his waning career.

In a brief statement, De Gaulle stressed the "Capital importance" of the new accord.

"It not only turns a page after a so-long and bloody history of conflict, but it also opens the doors to a new future for France and Germany and for Europe, and, consequently, the world," De Gaulle said.

Adenauer commented that De Gaulle's words expressed his own feeling perfectly. He said, "I have nothing to add."

In his remark, De Gaulle emphasized the word Europe.

He and Adenauer evidently remained at odds about Britain's application to join the European Common Market, De Gaulle is opposing Britain's admission to the six-nation Continental union; Adenauer is for it.

The two leaders issued a joint declaration terming the new French-German cooperation an "indispensable step on the road to a united Europe, which is the goal of the two peoples."

Spokesmen for the two governments emphasized that the treaty is not exclusive, that it is directed against no one, and that it will promote unification. A West German spokesman said it is open to all other states of Western Europe.

The treaty, subject to ratification by the West German Parliament, pledges the two nations to close and frequent consultation in the fields of diplomacy, defense, education, culture and youth programs. The chiefs of state or government will meet at least twice a year. The foreign, defense and education ministers will meet quarterly.

The chiefs of staff of the two armies will meet every other month, and subordinate officials in the various ministries will exchange visits once a month.

Cut In Deductions Seen In JFK's Tax Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sweeping curtailment of individual deductions will bite deeply into the income tax savings to be proposed by President Kennedy in his special tax message to Congress Thursday.

The changes, it was learned Tuesday, will include an over-all limit on total personal deductions. This reportedly would cover charity contributions, interest paid, state and local tax payments, casualty losses, and medical costs.

Of the $3.5 billion worth of revenue-raising reforms to be asked, close to $3 billion—or roughly 8 per cent—would come from the tightening of individual income tax rules, informed sources said.

Sweeping Changes

The clampdown would make important changes, it was understood, in the tax treatment of capital gains, stock options, inheritances, dividend payments, and percentage depletion allowances.

However, the odds are high in Washington that Congress will trim Kennedy's tax reduction proposals substantially and will make even sharper cuts in his recommendations for revisions.

The whole tentative package was received at the White House Monday from the Treasury, where officials worked on it through the weekend. Final decisions on some points remain to be made by the President.

Kennedy laid the program out at his regular Tuesday meeting with Democratic congressional leaders, and they said later it was the main topic at the White House breakfast session.

"I think it is a good bill," said Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, "and we all support it all the way."

All taxpayers would come out well ahead because of the $13-billion reduction over three years in individual income and corporation tax rates which Kennedy has called the most urgent business before Congress this year.

Some 'Shrinkage'

But the $11-billion saving earmarked for consumers, as a stimulus to business would be shrunk to about $8 billion if Congress approved the whole lot.

The proposed $2.5 billion of corporation savings would be pared to around $2 billion by the closing of what the Treasury calls loopholes in present tax law.

And the full benefit of the lower corporation rates would not be felt by industry until 1969, it was indicated, because of a gradual speed-up in the schedule of quarterly tax payments which would bring into the Treasury $1.5 billion a year.

For individuals, the basic exemption of $600 each for the taxpayer and his dependents would not be changed. But informants disclosed that a major curtailment is in prospect for personal deductions—a big tax saver for millions of Americans who have mortgages, storm losses, or heavy doctor bills.

The plan apparently would work like the present limit on medical deductions, under which the taxpayer can claim only those medical and hospital costs which

Third Class Mail Sealing Change Noted

EAST Stroudsburg Postmaster Norman Gregory and Stroudsburg Postmaster Fred Rhodes yesterday announced there has been an important change in the postal regulation concerning sealing of third-class mail.

Third-class mail consists of all printed matter not in the first or second-class; such as greeting cards, advertising circulars, and mimeograph letters when mailed in quantities of twenty or more.

Prior to the change in regulations, only certain sizes of third-class mail could be sealed. Now all third-class mail may be sealed if the two words THIRD CLASS are legibly marked on either the front or back of the envelope or wrapper.

Mailing of sealed articles at the third-class rate of postage is deemed to be with consent of the mailer to postal inspection of the contents.

The post office now recommends that all mail be sealed to facilitate handling by machine.

Community Development Contest

THE 1963 Community Development Contest, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce, will this year give prizes totalling $20,000.

The contest is open to any community, and there are five size brackets from over 25,000 population to under 2,000.

Communities entering the contest must keep a record of new community projects to submit to the judging authority. The community with the best record in each group will be given top prizes. Prizes are also awarded through seventh place.

Official entries must be submitted by April 1. The official organization selected to represent the community, will be the Pocono Mountains Junior Chamber of Commerce, and application must be through the organization.

A record book must then be kept listing, with pictures if possible, all community betterment projects, ranging from conservation projects to educational developments.

17 School Districts Get $151,141.09

Record Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — Monroe County's 17 school districts have been forwarded transportation subsidies amounting to $151,141.09, according to the State Treasurer's Office.

The subsidies are reimbursement for the State's share of the actual costs of operating school buses in the school districts during the 1961-62 school year.

Monroe County school districts and the amount forwarded to each district:

Barrett Township, $5,063.93; Chestnut Hill Township, $10,334.72; Coolbaugh Township, $10,240.14; East Stroudsburg Borough, $23,809.82; Eldred Township, $8,713.63; Jackson Township, $4,607.64; Middle Smithfield Township, $2,102.68; Mt. Barber Shop Singers Plan Songfest

THE SECOND annual "Night of Harmony" will be held by the SPEBSQSA on April 6 in the East Stroudsburg Area Joint High School auditorium.

The imposing initials of the group stand for the "Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America."

Traditional "close-in" harmony will be the fare when the "Mainstreet Four" of Livingston, N.J., current Mid-Atlantic District champs, headline the show.

Supporting them will be the "Free Lancers" of Dundalk, Md. Also included are the "Tama-Chords" of Mahanoy City and the "Timbre-Tones" of the Stroudsburg Chapter.

The local chorus, under the direction of Russ Speicher, will sing old favorites such as "When You Were a Tulip," and others.

Newfoundland Area Group Honors Ole Miss Editor

NEWFOUNDLAND — The teenagers of the area have singled out Miss Sidna Brower, a resident of Memphis and editor of the University of Mississippi's campus newspaper, to receive their weekly "golden letter" of commendation and thanks.

Miss Brower was the author of editorials in The Mississippi daily campus newspaper, during the height of the university's integration crisis. While she did not discuss nor advocate either integration or segregation, believing that freedom of the press does not include attempting to sway public opinion, but rather to disseminate news, Miss Brower urged students to remain calm and to meet the crisis intelligently, without violence. She was commended by many campus organizations, as well as by non-student groups.

This week, it has been announced that she has been nominated for a Pulitzer Prize. The golden letter project of the local youth unit seeks local, national and international figures who are deserving of a special thank you. Among those receiving the letters, which invariably point out that the recipient is "showing youth the way," have been Dr. Jonas Salk, the Hon. Carlos Romulo, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, Dr. Tom Dooley, President Eisenhower, President Kennedy, and many other well-known persons, in addition to local residents who have served above and beyond the call of duty.

Church Vocation Is Stressed

NEWFOUNDLAND — "You can enter almost any field, and still have a church vocation," the Greentown - Newfoundland-South Sterling Youth Fellowship was told during the meeting at Hemlock Grove Church this week.

The Rev. James Jeffers and the Rev. Larry Lindenmuth, Methodist and Moravian ministers respectively, discussed church vocations and Christian vocations during the meeting. They noted that, within the church, are needs for journalists, architects, statisticians, printers, missionaries — any vocation imaginable.

Requirements for church vocations were listed as "a call," or a definite feeling that you have been called to serve in a special way; education; and special education.

U.S. Public Relations Expert To Speak At Depot

THE MAN who holds one of the top public relations jobs in Government will be featured speaker at the Tobyhanna Army Depot Wednesday evening. He is R. P. Rosengren, Information Officer of the recently created U.S. Army Supply and Maintenance Command.

His talk on the role played by Federal employees in the recent Cuban crisis will be the highlight of a banquet at the Officers' Club celebrating the 80th anniversary of the U.S. Civil Service Act.

Rosengren, a former Army colonel, served as public relations officer to many of the nation's military and civilian leaders before his retirement from military service in 1961.

During World War II, he was on General Eisenhower's Public Relations staff, and in the Korean War served as Chief of Information for the Eighth Army.

Aided Army Secretaries He has done public relations work for former Secretaries of the Army Henry L. Stimson, Robert P. Patterson and Robert T. Stevens.

A graduate of Colgate University, he also holds a law degree from the University of Buffalo.

In 1937, he was named one of the 10 Outstanding Young Americans, a group which included Thomas E. Dewey and Howard Hughes.

The following year, he served as National President of the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In his present job, Rosengren supervises the information activities of 43 Army depots and related activities, employing more than 80,000 persons.

Scranton Spoke Like A Democrat

"GOVERNOR Scranton's speech sounded like he was reading from the Democratic platform," Monroe County Democratic state representative Van D. Yetter charged last night.

"I only hope his proposals will get as much support from Republicans as they have from Democrats," Yetter added.

Gov. Scranton, a Republican, said in a speech yesterday that he seeks emergency appropriations for the Industrial Development Program, to which Yetter says Democrats have given full support for years.

Yetter noted that, in fact, he had attempted to sponsor a bill in 1959 calling for emergency funds for such a project.

Shortway Center For Tourists Set

A KEYSTONE Shortway Tourist Center is to be located about a third of a mile north of the Delaware Water Gap bridge to help motorists in their travels, according to the Keystone Shortway News, published in Williamsport.

The center will be designed by Clarke and Rapuano, Inc., of New York City. Another center is to be located on the Erie Thruway west of the N.Y.-Pa. line. Both centers total $43,800 in cost.

In other news, Park H. Martin, state Highway Secretary, noted that a $60,500,581 expenditure is obligated for the 63 miles in service or under construction.

It was announced that 14.7 miles of the route have been completed in portions of Monroe, Clarion, and Jefferson Counties, and 48.3 miles are under construction in Monroe and other counties.

Over 245 miles are in final design or under study in other areas.

Z. H. Confair, state senator and president of the Shortway Association, has written Park Martin a letter of thanks. Martin recently retired as the State Secretary of Highways.

It was also noted that J. H. Beers, Inc., Bangor, has been awarded a contract for 1.11 miles of the road at a cost of $2,340,336.36 in Columbia County.

Knights To Confer Degrees

THE FATHER Butler Council 4084, Knights of Columbus, held its regular business meeting Monday at 8 p.m. Grand Knight James T. Ogden presided.

The degree team will visit Mount Pocono Feb. 5 to exemplify a first degree on candidates from that area. All members are urged to witness the exemplification.

Andy LeBar exhibited and explained the "Telephone Tree" for the use of the council.

John Sullivan reported that the "Living Rosary and Renewal of Marriage Vows" ceremony will take place Sunday at 7 p.m. in St. Matthew's Church.

Membership Chairman Joseph DeRenzi heads the membership campaign. Other members of the committee are Angelo Dellaria, Martin Kearney, and James Maugeir.

James Murphy reported on the upcoming state convention, to be held at Tamiment. It will be hosted by the local council. Harry Beck, a former resident of Holidaysburg, was introduced to the council, and the social committee reported that a dance will be held Saturday at 8 p.m.

Woman Opposes, Others Favor Planning, Zoning

A STROUD Township housewife last night argued against planning and zoning for Monroe County communities on the basis that it is an invasion of privacy by government and, citing recent cases in New York and Philadelphia, that it results in graft being paid zoning boards for exceptions to ordinances regulating building in certain areas.

The woman was one of about 75 persons attending a public Court House at which R. Lee Hobough and Hebert H. Smith, consultants of the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co., outlined the case in favor of planning and zoning.

Marshalls Creek Firemen Answered 62 Calls In '62

THE MARSHALLS Creek Fire Company answered 62 calls during 1962, including one false alarm. Property value estimated at $56,125 was destroyed out of total value of $148,500. The value of property saved by the firemen was estimated at $92,375.

Grass fires accounted for most of the alarms, with 26; there were 14 dwelling fires, three commercial fires, two rescues, four auto fires, one lost person, two truck fires, 12 woods blazes, and the false alarm.

Dance Band, Majorettes To Perform

A JOINT presentation of the school band and majorettes will highlight a program Saturday at 8 p.m. in the East Stroudsburg Area Joint High School auditorium.

The dance band, under the direction of Ralph Zellner, will present a number of individual selections, and will accompany the program given by the majorettes.

The elementary, intermediate and senior majorettes, under the direction of Mrs. Sandra Yeaker, will go through a number of their routines. There will also be solos and duets by various members.

A special feature will be the girls' dance band.

Tickets may be obtained from any band member or majorette. Proceeds of the event will be used to purchase new majorette uniforms and a set of drums for the dance band.

Wind Gap Man Jailed On Morals

CLARK F. Kichline, 38, of Wind Gap RD 1, had a hearing yesterday before Homer E. Osborne Jr., Hamilton Township Justice of the Peace, on charges of incest and rape.

He was recommitted to the Northampton County jail pending a court decision setting bail. Trooper Donald C. Kresge of the Stroudsburg State Police was prosecutor.

Ex-Trooper Honored By Lodge

PETER A. Walsh of 170 Pokona Ave., Stroudsburg, who retired earlier this month after 25 years as a trooper with the Pennsylvania State Police, was honored at a testimonial dinner at the Log Cabin Inn, Fern Ridge, Monday night.

The affair was sponsored by O'Rourke Memorial Lodge, Fraternal Order of Police. Walsh received an engraved watch from the lodge.

Cpl. Ralph Cameron of Hazleton served as toastmaster. Attending were representatives from stations in Troop A, with headquarters at Hazleton, and Troop B, Wyoming.

Walsh served as a trooper and criminal investigator at Hazleton, Lehighton, Stroudsburg and Fern Ridge.

During the dinner, officers of the FOP were installed. They include Cpl. John Barone, Fern Ridge, president; Cpl. William Harsman, Hazleton, vice president; Trooper Donald G. Good, Stroudsburg, secretary, and Trooper Richard Saxe, Hazleton, treasurer.

A Wise Committee Choice

Senator Z. H. (Dick) Confair, Williamsport, has come off State Senate reorganization with one committee chairmanship and seats on eight other major committees—despite his open opposition to Senator M. Harvey Taylor, Dauphin County for the post of president pro tem.

The "Father of Keystone Shortway," as he is called all across the Commonwealth, held membership on five committees during his first term. Naturally, the GOP Senator held no chairmanship posts under the Democratic administration.

It will be recalled he rose to some unpopularity with his party leadership when he asserted his independence and voted for the gas tax increase to provide the Highway Department under Park Martin with matching funds for federal-state highway construction. His vote was enough to pass the tax and send the Keystone Shortway and many other major road projects in this area and throughout the state into high gear. His courage on this vote won the plaudits of many newspapers and individuals across the state.

Confair's hometown newspaper recently speculated that Senator Taylor, as president pro tem might retaliate for the Williamsport Senator's opposition by slicing him down on committee appointments. Just the opposite happened.

Senator Confair is now chairman of Forests and Waters, is also a member of the Highways, Finance, Appropriations, Law and Order, Banking, Constitutional Changes and Federal Relations, Public Health and Welfare Committees.

Knowing and admiring Senator Confair as we do and as so many others, we are happy to congratulate him on his appointments and to congratulate Senator Taylor recognizing a man who is respected in his own community and across the state.

Opinions Of Other Editors

The State Police Head

Now that the debate over the selection of an out-of-state man as Pennsylvania's State Police Commissioner has subsided, perhaps a more objective look can be taken at Governor Scranton's choice.

The criticism most frequently leveled at the appointment of E. Wilson Purdy, police chief of St. Petersburg, Fla., has been voiced in the query: Are there no suitable men among the ranks of Pennsylvania's policemen?

Surely there are suitable men, men well qualified. These men are well acquainted with the way things are done in Pennsylvania and through their years of service, which gives them the experience to qualify for the commissioner's job, they have come to know a great many troopers.

But it is just this experience within the state, this knowing how things are done and this cultivation of friends and creation of enemies among the state's troopers that may make a man less desirable for the job. The former commissioner was a man from the ranks, and "favoritism" and "persecution" were the charges leveled at him by his own men.

Government Self-Investigation

Every once in a while a book erupts from the bookstores and the lending libraries and makes its mark on legislation. The most famous instance of this is, perhaps, Upton Sinclair's novel about early Twentieth Century conditions in the meat-packing industry, "The Jungle."

Sinclair hoped that his novel would make converts to his favorite panacea of socialism, which it fortunately failed to do. But it did result in our modern pure food and drug legislation. As Mr. Sinclair put it, "I aimed at the heart of the nation and hit its stomach."

Well, the stomach of our people is still a remarkably susceptible organ. A marine biologist, Miss Rachel Carson, noting that tree sprays kill robins as well as insects, recently wrote a series of magazine articles that were later published in book form as "Silent Spring."

Miss Carson's sympathies were with the birds, and she heeded to touch the hearts of bird-lovers with her moving chapters. Whether she has succeeded in establishing an effective political lobby for the birds is a moot question, but it is unarguable that she has a lot of people worried about poisonous insecticides that may wind up on the table in our food.

The contention that we are all being slowly poisoned by DDT and aldrin and other potent sprays which remain embedded in our vegetables despite washing and cooking has the garden clubs pressuring the politicians and memorializing State legislatures.

In Connecticut, for example, Governor Dempsey, who knows the garden club vote is not to be sneezed at, has appointed a special committee to investigate the use of insecticides in his State.

This is not without its ironic aspects, for it necessarily holds down in good part to government investigating itself. The truth is that the wholesale use of insecticides is something that has been largely promoted by local road commissions and by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. These governmental bodies are the ones who have been relying on indiscriminate spraying.

Will It Pass The Test?

The Pennsylvania Story

The Question Of Patronage

Harrisburg — As Republicans in Pennsylvania bite into the chore of taking over operation of State Government in their first hitch since 1954 they do so carrying with them a mounting internal issue over dispensation of the vast patronage pool again at their disposal.

Fundamentally the trouble centers around differences of opinion between county chairmen of the more heavily populated areas and Republican State leaders over the manner in which some 50,000 odd politically sponsored state jobs are to be filled.

Most county chairmen have faithful GOP elephantine followers in sizeable numbers clamoring for a crack at the jobs denied them during the past two Democratic administrations and are in no mood to brook by-passing on the state level — or any other level for that matter.

In fact, many a county chairman is irked not end by the utterances of some of the newly-appointed ranking officials who have let it be known that some Democratic jobholders may be retained on the state payroll under the Republican Scranton Administration, even though there may be precisely few.

These leaders contend that Republicans are just as qualified to do the work as current Democratic job holders — and having been exiled from patronage considerations for so long, can see no reason to retain donkey riding stalwarts on the payroll.

Some will readily concede that professional and career workers might not fall in this category, but concern is mainly over the bulk of jobs available.

Additionally, a number of chairmen have climbed on their high horse somewhat indignantly over the surmise of some of the new officials to the effect that the lower paying jobs would be of little interest to Republicans in outlying counties of the state.

Growled one nettled county chairman from northwestern Pennsylvania to this column: "If they'd see the list of applicants I have, no such remark would ever be made. Furthermore, if it's profitable for Democrats from my area to go to Harrisburg for such 'low paying' jobs, it would certainly be just as profitable for Republicans."

Another ranking point to some county chairmen is the fear that notwithstanding the promise from Republican State Headquarters that patronage would be channeled through local county chairmen first, too many appointments may be made direct from Harrisburg without local blessing.

Such a practice of course defeats strength of organization on the local level where local workers constantly have the threat of their jobs dangling over their heads — by the county chairman if political production is not forthcoming.

However the woes of Republicans on the burning issue of patronage dispensation are by no means unusual. Democrats faced the same dilemma when they occupied the gubernatorial throne room.

For example during the "transition" Democratic Leader Administration (1953-1959) nearly a score of county chairmen were on the outs with the Governor with the result that on patronage matters they were completely bypassed. Appointments to state jobs frequently were made without approval of local chairmen.

However to Republicans now in the saddle it is of course a serious and painful issue as they view their hopes for the years immediately ahead.

It is an internal issue state leaders must resolve before the Scranton Administration emerges very far beyond the swaddling stage.

The Allen-Scott Report

$1000 Dinner Guest List Is Closely Guarded

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington, January 23 — The list of paying guests to that $1000-a-plate Kennedy Administration dinner is thickly studded with big defense contractors, lobbyists for foreign governments, and builders of the huge office complexes the government is erecting all over the capital.

These giant corporations and lobbyists, with immense interests in government business, constitute the largest single group of contributors to this fund-raising affair, that poured into Democratic National Committee coffers.

The full list of paying guests is a closely-guarded secret. Only the top managers of the dinner have seen the list. It is so carefully guarded that an embarrassing snafu resulted in the seating of the guests, among them Cabinet members, congressional leaders and other prominent officials.

But the following significant details can be revealed: High officers of Grumman Aircraft and General Dynamics, which recently got a Defense Department contract to build this country's next fighter-interceptor, the F-111A, that will cost taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars, bought at least 10 of the $1,000-a-plate tickets — one table.

Other defense contractors who were large ticket buyers are officers of United Aircraft, Harvey Aluminum and International Telephone & Telegraph Company.

Charles Patrick Clark, Washington attorney who represents Spain and previously various other countries, purchased five tickets.

Other well-known foreign lobbyists, representing countries with sugar interests, who were ticket buyers are former Senate Democratic Leader Scott Lucas, III, former Representative Charles Brown, Mo., and Donald Dawson, White House assistant to President Truman.

A number of so-called small businesses that recently received loans from the Small Business Administration, Democratic Treasurer Richard Maguire, who also has an office in the White House, personally "invited" them by telephone to fork over.

High on the list of ticket sellers, both to the $1,000-a-plate dinner and the $100-a-seat gala, were the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, headed by Senator Vance Hartke, Ind., and the House Democratic Campaign Committee, chaired by Representative Michael Kurwan, Ohio.

Hartke's committee peddled $140,000 worth of tickets; Kurwan's $80,000.

Foremost ticket dispenser of both committees was Senator Olin Johnston, S. C., chairman of the Post Office & Civil Service Committee. Last year, he steered through the bill giving postal and other government workers sizable pay increases.

Both Grumman's F-111A contract and foreign lobbyists face Senate investigations.

A committee headed by Senator John McClellan, D-Ark., is digging into the fighter-interceptor contract to air charges that another company made a better offer. The lobbyist probe is being made by the Foreign Relations Committee headed by Senator J. William Fulbright, Ark. He is planning hearings early next month.

Unreported Tid-Bits—Democratic National Committee moguls went to exceptional lengths to ensure that the full list of dinner guests did not get into press hands.

Upon arriving at the banquet hall, the $1,000-a-plate guests found they had to queue up to learn where they were seated. Two women clerks of the committee were encoined at a table at the entrance door to dispense this information from stacks of cards. It turned out these cards were not alphabetically arranged, but were numbered according to the tables.

As a consequence, in a short time, a long line of prominent guests and their wives extended to the street or the hotel lobby.

As this astonishing logjam steadily got worse, tempers became ruffled and caustic comments became audible.

Finally Democratic Treasurer Maguire, the real boss of both the glittering dinner and the star-studded gala, climbed on a chair and apologetically announced, "Owing to a mix-up on the seating, we have to ask you to sit wherever you want to. Go to any vacant table and make yourselves at home. We're all a happy family, and you're welcome to sit anywhere."

That saved the guest list from becoming known, but not Maguire and National Chairman John Bailey from acid bars about their bungling.

The dinner demonstrated one fact: The First Lady is boss when it comes to determining where and with whom she dines.

It was her idea that she and the President, Vice President and Mrs. Johnson, and a few close friends dine privately and not with the $1,000-a-plate guests. At first, the President vetoed that.

Notwithstanding, that is exactly what happened.

While the paying guests dined, he and Johnson wandered around the tables shaking hands and exchanging greetings. Then they joined the First Lady, Mrs. Johnson and their personal guests in a private dining room.

The menu of the $1,000-a-plate dinner was exactly the same the hotel served in its own dining room at $4.25.

The arrangements for the dinner called for two types of hostesses—"seated" and "floating." When Maguire was asked to explain these mysterious designations he replied, "The seated hostesses are those who paid; the floating hostesses are those who didn't."

The Big Shot—While Democratic National Committee moguls are happily totting up the $1 million or so the second anniversary celebration produced, the chairman, Bedford Wynne, is still insisting he knows nothing about the $1,000-a-plate charge.

The wealthy co-owner of the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League asserts the glittering dinner was strictly his own party, he invited all the guests, and footed the bill. It's a remarkable story, but the amiable Texan is doggedly sticking to it.

He did that in an encounter with Washington newsmen, who sharply grilled him about the affair.

"Just what is the basis for asking people to this dinner?" one reporter asked Wynne.

"Those who worked hardest for the Democratic party," he replied.

"Who decides that?"

"I'm doing the inviting," dodged Wynne.

"Are you inviting guests regardless of whether they pay $1,000 or not?"

"I don't know anything about paying $1,000," claimed Wynne.

"This is a dinner I am giving for the President and Vice President and their wives. All those who are coming will be my guests."

"Then how do you explain the widespread selling of tickets at $1,000 a plate? There is no secret about that. We can give you the names who have been asked to pay that. In fact, you were at a meeting several weeks ago when Joseph Adams, former vice chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, denounced the plan to charge $1,000 a plate as 'plain immoral.'"

"This is my dinner," insisted Wynne, "and those who are attending will be my guests."

"And you are footing the bill?"

"That's right," asserted Wynne. "I'm the host."

Nominally, the Texan presided at both the dinner and the gala, but he was virtually unnoticed.

Left-Overs—More than $60,000 of $100-a-seat gala tickets were bought by Post Office officials. Apparently that Department topped the list of government ticket buyers. . . . Working closely with Democratic Treasurer Maguire in arranging the dinner and gala was George O'Gorman, former Assistant Postmaster General and now a member of the White House staff. There he is an assistant to Kenneth O'Donnell, long-time aide to President Kennedy. . . .

Revealing conversation overheard by a newsmen outside the Armory after the gala: Guest to a friend, "Didn't you enjoy the show? I noticed you didn't applaud."

"I liked the show all right, but I couldn't applaud because my arm is so stiff from being twisted to buy a ticket."

Dear Abby

You Try Being 'Neighborly'

Dear Abby: I believe in being a good neighbor, but I think my husband has been overlooking the good neighbor policy. For the past three years our house has been in a state of being "remodeled." We have holes in the floor, unpaned walls, unfilled floors, doorless and drawerless cupboards. Our driveway needs to be paved and our faucets all leak. Yet my husband finds time to build fences for the neighbors, fix their TV sets, spread concrete and what not. When he isn't volunteering, they are coming over and getting him. I am proud of my husband because he is a handy man to have around, but he's never around.

MR. FIXIT'S WIFE Dear Wife: The only reason a man will knock himself out doing odd jobs for the neighbors when his own fence needs mending is quite simple. He likes the "thanks" they give him.

Dear Abby: A friend of mine passed away some time ago. He weighed 230 pounds and was about six feet, six inches tall. What I would like to know is, how did they get him into a six-foot casket?

CURIOUS Dear Curious: There are caskets of all sizes and also caskets made to order, so there is no reason to assume that a man six-foot-six was buried in a six-foot casket.

Dear Abby: I am 17 and am considered a reliable baby-sitter. The lady next door has a two-year-old child with whom I have sat many times. I was asked to sit with their baby from seven in the morning until midnight on Saturday because they intended to go out of town. I agreed and got up at 6:30 to take the job. At five to seven she called and said, "We decided not to go so we don't need you. Ha Ha." I turned down a date to our football game and the big dance afterwards for this job because I needed the money. Other affairs have been cancelled out at the last minute. How would the lady like it if the sitter called five minutes before she was due to show up and said, "I just got a date and can't come. Ha Ha?" What is your advice?

JUST PLAIN ANGRY Dear Angry: Anyone's plans can change suddenly. However, if signals are switched on you more than once, refuse to sit for the person who stood you up.

U.S. Program In Algeria May Switch To 'Food For Wages'

(David B. Ottaway is studying Arabic at the University of Algiers and is writing for UPI, the New York Times, and Ottaway Newspapers - Radio, Inc.)

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY

ALGIERS, Algeria — United States and Algerian officials are scheduled to hold talks this week in Algiers on the possibility of converting present American emergency aid into a "food for wages" program.

The new plan may be the basis for a nation-wide reforestation project, badly needed in this war-scarred country.

Surplus wheat, flour, beans, oil, and milk is helping to keep alive 4,670,000 Algerians this winter. Since independence last July, about $80 million of food and medical supplies has been sent to this country.

The current emergency program ends officially March 31. However, a U. S. Agency for International Development (AID) spokesman said that food supplies would continue to flow into Algeria until the spring harvest gets underway in May or June.

4 Million Aided

The AID program, believed to be the largest of its kind for America, was originally set up to provide about 22 pounds of wheat, beans, oil and milk monthly to four million Algerians.

In addition, hundreds of milk stations have been established to provide milk and bread every morning to children up to 14 years old.

"We give each child as many cups of milk as he can drink and a good-sized portion of bread besides. The only thing we ask is that the child drink the milk at the station. This way we are sure it is not going to be sold or taken from him," explained a representative from the League of International Red Cross Societies (LICROSS).

ugar, most of which comes from Cuba, is also provided. But there is a general shortage of this commodity in most areas.

Despite the amount of supplies brought into the country, there is still not enough.

Less Than Needed

In the area around Souk Ahras, former French base for operations along the Tunisian border, Red Crescent (the Arabic Red Cross) and LICROSS officials are feeding 143,000 needy persons with supplies for only 100,000.

"This means that each person gets 1 to 18 pounds of wheat, beans and oil instead of 22. As things stand now, we are forced to give out one blanket for every five persons in a family," said a local Red Crescent representative in charge of distribution.

Hundreds of white bags with U. S. stars and stripes printed on them were piled up at the Souk Ahras distribution center. Here used clothes and blankets from America are sorted and destined for the 60,000 ex-refugees from Tunisia who have settled in the area. In addition, widows of war victims, their families, and local unemployed receive these clothes and food.

The most tragic example of food shortages is that of the oasis region. In that area there are 95,000 rations for some 600,000 persons qualified as "needy."

Despite big differences between official listings of needy persons and actual rations, there is little sign of actual starvation in eastern Algeria. But there is no doubt that without American aid hundreds of thousands would probably starve.

Both U. S. and Algerian officials have expressed concern for another problem created by this massive dole of free food and clothes. In many areas, particularly among the refugee populations, there is no desire to work while food is given out for nothing.

In the refugee camps around Bone, little has been done to keep up the grounds or organize washing and bathroom facilities. Houses left empty by the massive departure of French and now occupied by the refugees are filthy dirty.

"They refuse to sweep up the place unless we pay them," said one Algerian authority. "And we don't have the money."

Not Entirely True

However, LICROSS officials point out that this is not entirely true. Instructions have been sent to local authorities urging that the food be used as wages.

Said the sub-prefect in Collo, where 90 per cent of the working population is unemployed, "It's difficult to give free food to some and ask others to work for their portion. They even refuse to work for less than the official $1.40 rate per day."

For these reasons, U. S. and Algerian aid administrators are anxious to convert the present degrading dole into a straight "food for wages" program as soon as the new harvest permits.

Such a program is already successfully underway in the Constantine area, where three 10,000-man shifts are working on reforestation projects. Peasant and village workers are on the job ten days at a time but receive payment in food to hold them over a month's time.

Heading the program is 36-year-old Jean Carbinare, a French engineer already decided to become an Algerian citizen. He is the chief of the Protestant Christian Committee for Services in Algeria, in charge of distribution in the Constantine and Batna areas.

According to Carbinare, who already has the personal backing of Premier Ben Bella for his project, the American financed "food for wages" program could give jobs to 300,000 rural Algerians in a national effort to put a stop to the destruction of the countryside.

"It is this elegant aid from the United States that we want to use as finances for a two-year program to plant four to six million trees throughout Algeria," said Carbinare.

AID and American embassy officials are definitely interested in the idea and are waiting to be approached by the Algerian government.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Who minded the store? With about 300 people at the college hearing Jim Akin on Russia, another 200 at the court house for the hearing on planning and zoning plus all the regular meetings and parties there couldn't have been many people home last night.

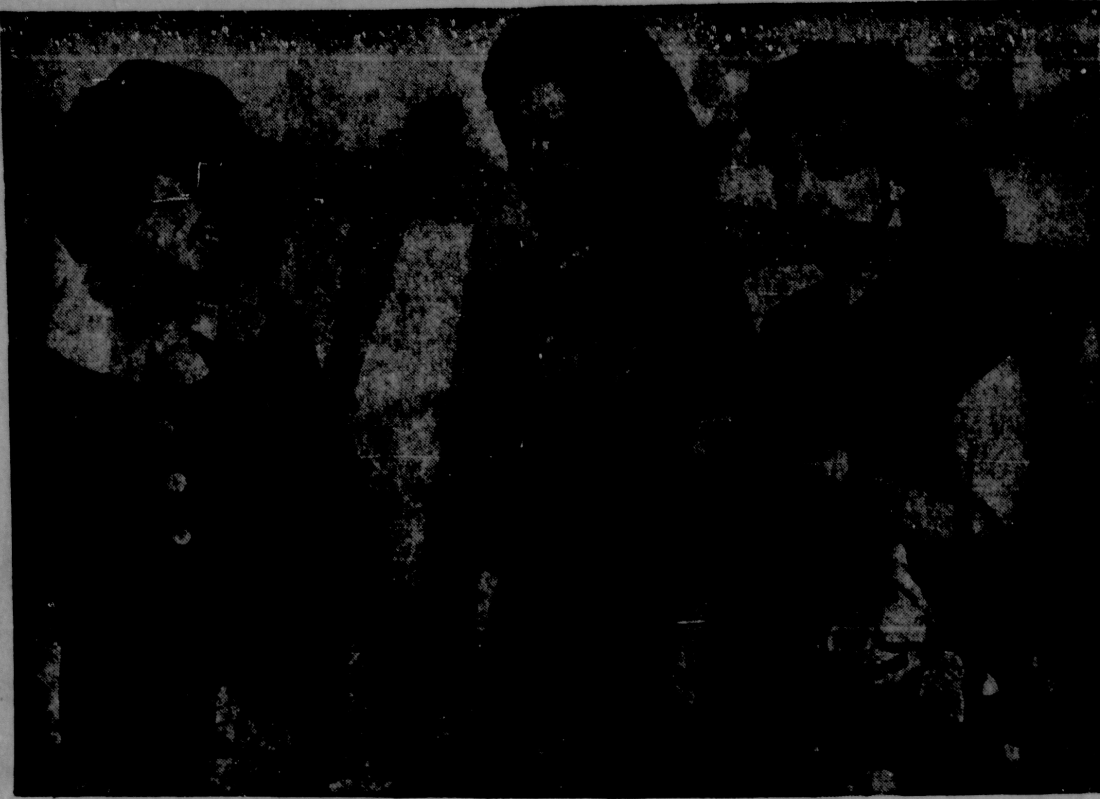

Hadassah must have been gratified by the turnout to hear Mrs. Akin, and their tub-thumping certainly paid off not only in numbers but in the calibre of the audience. Partly it was the status of the speaker herself and partly of the great curiosity we all seem to have about what Russia is really like, inside.

There may also have been a few attracted by the attention which Mrs. Akin has received because of her unusual first name (she was named for her father), and the fact that she has a husky voice and smokes cigars. Well, she did, but the cigars were very little ones, hardly more noticeable than a brown cigarette, and her voice is deep but otherwise she is really quite feminine, petite and with small slender hands.

One surprising thing was that, although she had thrown out a definite challenge on the need for Federal aid to education and Mrs. Koster pointed out that Mrs. Akins could speak with equal authority on Medicare, two subjects generally guaranteeing an argument in any public meeting, nobody at all took the challenges in their interest in Russia itself.

Another surprising thing was the number and spontaneity of the questions themselves, which I'd attribute to the fact that the meeting was held in the college dining room and the audience sat around tables. There are certain seeming disadvantages with an audience spread all over the place, but it does seem to promote an informal atmosphere in which questions bubble up as naturally as table talk, just as a more formal seating arrangement in rows with the speaker on a stage seems to strike the average audience dumb.

But then I'm for refreshments on any and all occasions.

Soviet vs. American Education Must Be Judged By National Ends, Speaker Says

By BOBBY WESTBROOK

"The important question is not 'Is Russian education better than ours?' but 'Has Soviet education served the purpose of Russia better than American education serves the American purpose?'" Jim Grant Akin told an audience of about 300 persons at the college dining room.

Mrs. Akin, Congressional liaison officer of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, recently toured Russia with the sub-committee on secondary education, and reported on the impressions at the meeting sponsored by the local branch of Hadassah.

The Soviet purpose is to train technicians, she pointed out, and in this they have succeeded admirably. The Soviet Minister of Education works out the industrial needs and then decides how many students will be needed to fill the quotas in the various industries.

Within the past ten years, Russia has been able to reverse the lead which America held in graduate engineers, now graduating 126,000 a year to 45,000 a year in this country. However, she questioned the type of "engineers," pointing out that while Russia graduates an enormous number of doctors each year, they are of three types, with the lowest grade corresponding to well-trained nurses in this country.

Admitting that the committee had been shown the best secondary schools, she said that from those observations Russia has done a tremendous job in giving some education to the great mass of people, especially on the technical level of trades like plumbers or brick masons.

"The most impressive thing about Russian education, however," she said, "is the tremendous desire for education among the people themselves and the motivation for it. Education is the sole means to advancing, the one place where there is competition and a chance to stretch personal initiatives, the only opportunity to all individual needs."

In the special schools, especially the language schools, although the teacher said that these were the children of workers, a poll of the students themselves showed that but only two out of 30 could be called workers. The others were children of civil servants or party members.

Talented youngsters are sent on to college, she said, through a system of scholarships. They are guaranteed a job but must take the one to which they are assigned.

Another impressive phase of education in Russia is the great number of foreign students from under-developed countries which the Party has brought there for study in Russian schools, she said.

She also spoke of the role of the Young Pioneer groups, controlled by the party, which are used for disciplinary purposes. Teachers in Russia, she reported, are well paid, have excellent retirement plans and hold positions of prestige. They also have strict control over their students, she added.

Turning to American education, she contrasted its purpose: to train its youth to live in a free world.

Not Technical Factories "Certainly I am not suggesting that we should try to compete with Russia by turning our educational institutions into technical factories," Mrs. Akin said, "but we should examine American education in view of how it is serving our purposes."

Those purposes are not being served, she indicated, by the one million students who drop out of high school each year as a result of which the labor market is flooded with unskilled workers and relief roles increase.

Also a loss to America is the fact that thousands of talented young people cannot afford college, she said.

The "Best" Could Be Better

Although our educational system is the best in the world, one out of every five persons has had sub-standard training and there are 8 million "functional illiterates," Mrs. Akins said. "Help is needed in many areas," she said, "and that help should come from local and state government if possible. If not, then Federal funds should be used," contending that Federal aid did not mean Federal control.

One of the major realizations of the present comparison of Russian education, she said, was of the direct connection between education and power.

Mrs. Akins was the guest of honor at a small dinner preceding the open meeting held in the college dining room. Representatives of many educational, civic and professional groups in the county were present.

Mrs. Albert Koster, president of Hadassah, welcomed the group, thanking Dr. LeRoy Koehler for making the facilities of the college available for the talk. Mrs. Frank Butler, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Akin.

Following her talk, there was a wide range of questions, most of them directed to Soviet education itself. Following the discussion period, coffee and cakes were served.

The Past Councilors, Daughters of America will hold a covered dish supper on Friday night at 6 at the home of Jennie Clifton, 78 Lennox Ave., East Stroudsburg. Members are asked to bring table service.

Barrett Unit Sponsors School Essay Contest

Barrett—The American Legion Evans-Blitz American Legion Auxiliary, Post 922, is sponsoring an essay contest at the Pocono Mountain Joint High School.

The subject of the essay is to be Americanism. A prize list will be announced. Rules for the contests are available at the school. Deadline for essays is March 1.

The announcement was made at a recent meeting of the unit at the home of Mrs. Malinda Havlik. Mrs. Lydia Christenson, president, asked Mrs. Gladys Hewlings to report on the Christmas Cheer and Rehabilitation and child welfare program for the 17 members present.

During the holidays, four local veterans were hospitalized, John Baker, Al Van Driesen, Bill Laird and August Oiler.

The unit voted to donate a sum to the March of Dimes, and the Donald Heater Family Fund. The Spring Variety Show was discussed and the unit's participation in the community project will be vocal soloists.

The next meeting will be in the form of a game party at the home of Mrs. Malinda Havlik. Every member is to bring a 50c gift.

Kimono Big At Italian Showings

By LOUISE HICKMAN
Associated Press Fashion Writer.

Florence, Italy (AP) — If you have a kimono, you're set for summer. Chop it off, nip it in, or cut it low in the back.

This was the message at the Florence spring and summer fashion showings Sunday in the Pitti Palace. Italian couture houses—including Emilio Pucci—presented their boutique collections, and kimonos were all the rage.

Afterward Lanotti and Forquet opened the couture high fashion phase of the shows. Forquet had a winner, as beautifully restrained as his first collection a year ago. It glowed in soft powder colors of pink, peach, apricot and ochre.

His half-moon bodice seams held the silhouette close to the body. Skirts jutted forward in folded apron panels. Backs were slim and straight.

The kimonos were shown by at least half a dozen houses.

Pucci showed kimono-topped playsuits in black or white silk with little wrap skirts.

Marucelli did kimono tunics in dresses, sometimes shift-fitted, in soft silk prints with deep back décolletés and wide stiff belts.

Enzo's silk beach kimono in tiny scrawled prints had matching bikini and sun glasses. Antonelli had kimono boleros in Indian blanket fabrics or beaded suede. High-waisted jumpsuits from Valentino had kimono tops.

In the Forquet high-fashion collections, several day dresses had long flat front panels that snapped into the neckline, then whisked off to show the concave front of a dress with dead straight backs.

Back interest on little silk dresses for late day included looped necklines over deep décolletés, and little jackets that clasped at the neck and then fell away to reveal bareness.

Forquet showed domed smooth straw hats with rising, almost pasted-flat brims. These were tilted to one side, as were a number of styles repeating the great flat saucer of his first collection.

Penny Supper Menu Planned By Women

The Stroudsburg Lutheran Women Workers planned a Penny Supper at a recent meeting in the home of Mrs. Betty DeHaven.

The menu of ham and meatloaf will be served March 30 in the Pocono Township firehouse.

Also planned is a bazaar for Aug. 14. Included will be a fancywork table, baked goods, grab bag, parcel post booth and refreshments.

Mrs. Robacker President Of Moravian Guild

Newfoundland, Mrs. Hannah Robacker was re-elected president of the Moravian Ladies Aid during the annual dinner meeting at The Brookside, South Sterling.

Mrs. Robacker, who has served for more than a dozen years in the office, and who is well-known for her community service activities, heads this slate also re-elected at the meeting: Helen Feigel, vice president; Kathryn Krautter, secretary; Hannah Schelbert, assistant secretary; Peggy Beehn, treasurer.

The Aid meets each Thursday to work on quilts and conduct business meetings.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

I mentioned previously, I believe, that ever since my son's first and second paintings were hung in our Wyckoff Art Show, there has been a distinctly new look about our home. To some it may be a cluttered look. Whatever it is, its component parts are canvas boards in various stages of drying, tubes of paint, paper palettes, a vase filled with brushes, sticks of charcoal, numerous sketch pads, and, over all, the heady aroma of turpentine and linseed oil. Of a sudden, my son would rather buy art materials than hamburgers or cokes . . . like hundreds of persons before him he has discovered that painting can be an absorbing, rewarding pastime.

Being as interested as he is, I suppose it's natural that he should try making an artist out of me . . . and this last Sunday night he did. Placing the materials before me, he said, "This, Mother, is what you're painting . . . now get to it!" My subject was a rather sad sack thing . . . an awkward, long-stemmed, single-leaved daffodil in a cracked pot. Tim had borrowed it from Blanche Mackey.

Not knowing the first thing about perspective, I must say the result leaves much to be desired. One can recognize a table . . . a flower pot . . . and table cloth. But the fascinating feature of my canvas, I think, is the daffodil. Having watched Sterling Strauser at work, and being a great admirer of his technique, I tried to copy. I sketched my flower into the background with charcoal, and it was almost recognizable. "Of course," my critic criticized, "you must decide whether or not you are a realist or whether you are painting abstract. You don't mix the two on one canvas." (Some people are just jealous, don't you think?—always looking for flaws!)

Oh well . . . the painting may not be much, but I solved the problem of a signature. I simply signed it MOM. Now it cannot possibly be blamed on anyone else who shares my surname. Also . . . since it's at least partially abstract, and since abstracts should look as well upside down as right side up, this makes sense either way. Up-end it, and MOM reads WOW—which could be either the title or the artist's pseudonym.

P.S.—I have just discovered the real story of why my children hounded me to paint. Blanche Mackey, who is always cooking up something (and not necessarily on a Frigidaire range) had schemed with them. I was to be tricked into producing a masterpiece, and she would smuggle it into the Wyckoff Art Show Saturday, unknown to me.

The sorry truth dawned on me Monday afternoon (thank heaven I was busy Friday night!) When Freida Manze, Donna Sandt and Nancy Strauser casually asked if I'd seen the interesting new painting that had just arrived in our show. I bolted down the steps . . . and there it was, posed beside the "model"—a sign reading, "Painted by Madalyn Maloney—the Wyckoff Shopper." As I grabbed it up, before the mistrusting eyes of several baffled spectators, my son intercepted. "Please, Lady," he cried, "Don't run off with this valuable painting." The only thing to their credit, the traitors, is their failure to award me a ribbon. They would have . . . but they couldn't find any Honorable Mention ribbons in the Unmentionable Class.

My face is still alizarin crimson . . . but my thoughts! Ah . . . THEY are burnt amber.

Our show ends Saturday . . . so be sure to pay your final visit. If YOU have a wish to paint, invest in your artist supplies now. You know . . . maybe I'll have the last laugh. Maybe I really will enter the Art Show next year!

Whitesell Family Secrets Revealed, Recipes, That Is, By Granddaughter

By Linda Pipher
Daily Record Home Economist

I can't imagine a fashion show in Stroudsburg without Kate Mullins modeling. She is the type that give designers the urge to create for her flair for fashion is evident not only on a stage but on Main Street. She's one of those fortunate females who can look good in anything, even in playclothes!

When I was talking with her downtown one day, she told me how she loves to cook, and I couldn't resist the urge to ask her for some of her favorite recipes. In the course of conversation she told me that her grandfather, William "Boy" Whitesell used to operate a restaurant in the building which is now the Frances Burrows shop.

When they moved to East Stroudsburg he opened another restaurant across from the railroad station where he specialized in such delicacies as pheasant, game, trout and seafood. The food was so good that people traveled from miles away to sample the food. It was at this time that he was given a deviled crab recipe from a chef, on one condition—that he never give it to another person.

Through the years it has stayed in the family, until now, when Kate is good enough to share it with us. So this is truly a treasured recipe, and aren't we fortunate to get it?

Grampa Whitesell's Deviled Crab

1 pound crab meat
Pick over crab meat to remove all shells. Put layer of crab meat in pan. Sprinkle with salt, paprika and dry mustard. Then put remainder of crab meat over this. Sprinkle with same, dot with butter. Put in warm (not hot) oven and let it heat through.

Step II

Put through meat grinder and chop fine:

2 small onions
4 stalks celery
1 green pepper

Saute this mixture in butter. After it cools a few minutes, add:

1 tablespoon (heaping) flour
1 cup milk

Heat until it cooks. Mix this with:

heated crab meat
1 egg yolk

handful of chopped parsley
1 tablespoon cracker crumbs

Let this mixture cool. Refrigerate a few hours. Make into cakes. Roll in cracker crumbs. Then egg, and lastly crumbs. Fry

Lady Psychologist Serves As U.N. Housemother

By Jean Sprain Wilson

United Nations (AP)—Beyond a door conspicuously marked "Staff Counselor" are the offices of Mrs. Doris Kowarski, a handsome woman with good listening ears, sealed lips, and the only files in the United Nations that can never be opened to anyone.

Staff members here call her three rooms the heart of the U.N. and Mrs. Kowarski the U.N. Housemother.

Yet it is unlikely that any housemother has ever dealt as consistently with so much aching loneliness or personal tragedy.

Since her arrival in 1949, the Polish-born psychiatrist has aided in solving the dilemmas of some 4000 persons, strangers in a foreign land with a need to adjust to new jobs and a different culture.

"So many walls separate the U.N. workers from the people in this country," points out soft-spoken Mrs. Kowarski. "Language barriers and financial differences are sometimes only the beginning."

Behind the Door
To assure the troubled that his counselor understands what it is like to be far away from home, the U.N. insisted on choosing a foreign psychologist. Mrs. Kowarski, an attractive, 50ish ash blonde was educated in France and has spent much of her life there.

"I came only to stay a year," she sighs, "but I had too many problems to solve to think about going home."

Behind her closed door diplomats and guides alike unburden their sorrows to the sympathetic lady.

Among her problems are the high cost of sickness in the U.S.; perils of installment plans; exposure to too much recreation; children who have become too Americanized; husbands who are too suburbanized; tragic love affairs, mental illness, alcoholism, sudden death, even suicides.

No Wolf Whistles
However, Mrs. Kowarski also works diligently at solving minor disasters such as office quarrels, misunderstandings with department stores, and cantankerous landlords. Sometimes American culture is the culprit. For instance—

"Every once in a while a woman will confess hurt feelings because men in this country don't look at her appreciatively. She wants to know what's wrong with her. It's my job to explain that this is a different society. Oglng women here just isn't polite."

In the beginning Mrs. Kowarski's hardest problem was gaining the trust of persons from countries dominated by iron fists. She includes those from Latin American lands as well as the Com-

In deep fat. Yield: 9 or 10 crab patties. (These patties may be put in greased pan, brushed with butter, and baked until brown).

Last year at a Woman's Club meeting, Kate was talking with Mrs. Harry Kreege and Mrs. Lucy Bensinger. Reminiscing about the days of the local 500 Club, they told her how they loved to attend club meetings at Kate's grandmother's house, Leila Whitesell, because of the wonderful food prepared for them. Here's one of her recipes:

Grampa Whitesell's Composition Cake
1 cup butter
1 1/2 cup powdered sugar
(available at local specialty store or use confectioner's sugar)

3/4 cup milk
3 eggs (separated)
1/2 teaspoon baking soda

1 wine glass (2 oz.) sherry or brandy
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup raisins
1 cup nuts

Cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add egg yolks. Beat well. Then add flour which has been sifted with cinnamon, nutmeg, and baking soda. Add milk alternately with flour mixture. Add raisins, nuts, and sherry. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in loaf or tube pan in 350 oven for 50 to 60 minutes, for the loaf cake; 25-30 for layer cake. Frost with seven minute or white icing.

Kate's mouth still waters when she thinks of her grandmother's wonderful meals; roast guinea hen with all the fixins, plum pudding with the delicious hard sauce with the "stick" in it. Her mother followed in Kate's grandmother's footsteps, and Kate hopes she's tagging along somewhere. I'll bet she is—how could she help it with such a wonderful background? In fact, here's proof; this is one of Kate's own concoctions!

Kate's Deviled Clams
2 cans minced clams
1 small onion, chopped
4 stalks celery, chopped
1/2 green pepper (may be omitted)
3 hard boiled eggs (cut fine)
1 can cream of celery soup
1/2 cup can of milk
1/2 cup seasoned ready mix stuffing
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

In large pan saute chopped vegetables. Then in same pan add clams, eggs, soup, milk, prepared stuffing, and Worcestershire. Mix well. Put in greased casserole. Cover with additional seasoned stuffing mixed with butter. Bake at 375 until bubbly. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

With this casserole, which can be made early in the day, Kate serves baked potatoes, slaw, and peas. Sometimes she bakes the potatoes early in the day, splits them lengthwise, scoops out the inside and mashes the potatoes with a little butter, milk, and grated sharp cheese. Then the potatoes are piled back in the shell and topped with more grated cheese, and popped into the oven for 30 to 40 minutes with the clam casserole, for the evening meal.

I WISH Kate would follow in her grandfather's footsteps and open a restaurant, don't you?

Bible Class Elects Mrs. Peet As President

Newfoundland, Mrs. Thelma Peet was re-elected president of the Moravian Adult Bible Class during January meeting held at the church.

Other officers chosen by the group were Martha Smith, vice president; Hannah Schelbert, secretary; Miriam Ehrhardt, first assistant secretary; Esther Hartzel, second assistant secretary; Ruth Ehrhardt, treasurer; Arthur Kramer, teacher; the Rev. Larry Lindemuth, assistant teacher.

During the meeting, a Bible study on "Feeding of the 5,000" was conducted.

The class will meet again on February 19 at 8 p.m. at the church.

She Is A Top-Drawer Gal So Far As Filing Goes

By Roberta Fleming Roach

Career-wise, history is repeating itself for Mrs. Madeline Truslow. Back in 1939-40, Madeline was next-to-last woman employee to leave the New York World's Fair.

One Of The First
Then, over 20 years later, when plans were being formulated for the coming 1964-65 New York World's Fair, Madeline, whose present job is Supervisor of General Files for the Fair, found herself the second employee to start working.

And it all came about because, when Madeline began her career as a file clerk, she made it a point to be a good file clerk.

Good With Files
"There's a lot to be said for being good with the files and making a career of filing," Madeline told me in her busy office lined with wall-to-wall filing cabinets.

"The filing department is the nerve center of any organization," she went on in her friendly, engaging way.

"Consequently, even though filing is a behind-the-scenes job, you don't have to justify and explain your work. Business realizes its importance."

Madeline believes also — and she believes this rightly, since half the women in the United States around age fifty are in the labor force — that filing is a good job for mature women to consider. In this work, as she says, youth and glamour don't really matter as long as you're meticulous in keeping B behind A.

To make your mark in the world of steel files, however, you have to have a mind that likes order and detail. And that, of course, was what Madeline had to move her, figuratively speaking, from the bottom drawer of a filing career to her present top-drawer spot.

Back in the mid-thirties, when Madeline graduated from college as a business administration major, jobs were hard to come by.

she thinks of her grandmother's wonderful meals; roast guinea hen with all the fixins, plum pudding with the delicious hard sauce with the "stick" in it. Her mother followed in Kate's grandmother's footsteps, and Kate hopes she's tagging along somewhere. I'll bet she is—how could she help it with such a wonderful background? She Climbed To The Top In Her Filing Career.

ing for an exposition by a woman who'd worked on the files at the 1933-34 Chicago World's Fair. While Madeline learned a d worked on this job, Fate was working for her, because officials of the then-approaching 1939-40 New York World's Fair made a trip to Texas to try to find someone who would be capable of setting up and handling files for their Fair.

Madeline filled the bill. So, when she was hired for the job, she climbed to the next drawer of her filing career by taking this important behind-the-scenes job. And she's helping history repeat itself again for the 1964-65 Fair.

Behind The Scenes
"In jobs, we can't all be Indian chiefs out front," she maintains. "Some of us have to be happy and important behind the scenes."

Good Taste In Accessories Supplant Junk

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Decorative accessories, a far cry from the household junk available several decades ago, are helping to shape a new look of good taste in the American home.

Many accessories are imports, eight won awards given by the American Institute of Interior Designers.

The 1963 awards are for hand-woven tapestries from Sardinia; black porcelain bowls and planters, matte glaze vases, sterling silver and porcelain cutlery from Germany; Swedish serving trays with non-slip surfaces; cast iron casseroles with white enamel interiors and teak handles, stackable bottles from Finland. There are hand-cut solid glass sculpture from Sweden and a number of new pieces of Danish silver. Winning towels made and designed in America are called "Snowflakes," "Northern Lights" and "Stockholm."

The Daily Record, The Stroudsburg, Pa. — Wed., Jan. 23, 1963

Though it was always possible for important American homes to choose accessories from antique shops, the average home 11 years ago was limited to a garish assortment of cheap ceramic figurines, wall plaques, ash trays. Salt poured from a gazelle's horns or a penguin's fins. Ship's wheel designs were likely to reveal grooves slated for tomato juice glasses. One outlandish design overlapped another.

One of the first to observe the unrealistic inequality of accessories and furniture in the home was Andrea Marangoni, president of an import company, who 13 years ago noted that "although Americans made the most beautiful furniture in the world, there was absolutely no line of good or even medium-priced accessories."

"There was nothing but cheap and unimaginative stuff available," he recalls, "so I went to Italy and created a line of accessories, the first major accessory line launched here, I believe. The stores didn't want to fiddle with higher-priced accessories at first, but soon realized they were wasting wall space, and that good decorative accessories could help in the sale of furniture."

Many companies have copied his items verbatim, he says, others are copied for the lower priced market. But Marangoni adds that this helps raise the level of the decorative accessories field which has long needed to further the cause of good design.

Bangor Tops Phillipsburg

BANGOR — Dick Snyder pumped in a field goal with only seven seconds remaining to keep Bangor's winning streak alive as the Slaters trimmed Phillipsburg, 56-54, in a thrilling come-from-behind victory here last night.

It was, indeed, a fitting shot for Snyder who was the Slaters' big gun throughout the battle. He finished with a grand total of 22, hitting on 10 field goals and a pair from the foul line. Tom Moyer aided and abetted the Slater cause with 12 points, scoring on four field goals and four more from the free throw mark.

Bill Heller, oddly enough, who led Bangor to victory in their last outing against Nazareth, was held scoreless in this clash. The Slaters of Coach Bill Pensyl were held to a mere four points in the initial period while the visiting Jerseyites waited out in front, 15-4, as Bangor was unable to get its hoop machine in gear.

But they found the range in the second canto although still being outscored by 19-18 as the Stateliners held a 34-22 halftime bulge.

Different Story

But it was an entirely different story in the second half as the Slaters outscored the visitors in each of the remaining two quarters by margins of 18-10 and 16-10 to gain their eighth consecutive triumph and 11th of the season against only two reversals.

After Snyder's tie-breaking goal in the waning seconds of the game, Pete Speer intercepted a Phillipsburg pass to crush P's hopes of getting off the tying shot.

In the preliminary JV battle, Phillipsburg gained a 58-56 triumph in an overtime session after both clubs had battled to a 54-54 standstill in regulation time.

State Trio Honored For Academics

PENN STATE football players Joe Galardi, Al Gursky and Gerry Farkas have been named to the 1962 All-American Academic squad sponsored by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

The all-academic squad was originated by the college sports publicists in 1952 to honor outstanding scholars among the nation's top football players and to encourage high school athletes to recognize the close relationship existing between scholarship and sports at the college level.

Center Galardi, the Nittany Lions' 1962 captain, and halfback Gursky, are enrolled in the college of business administration, majoring in marketing. Tackle Farkas, who was graduated at the end of the Fall term, majored in physical education and plans to pursue graduate work in that field.

All three were named several times throughout their grid careers to Penn State's Athletic Honor Roll for scholastic excellence.

Included on the latest all-academic squad are such players as Terry Baker of Oregon State; end Pat Richter of Wisconsin; Paul Flattley of Northwestern; Steve Barnett of Oregon and Pat Culpepper and Johnny Treadwell of Texas.

VanderKelen Signs With Minnesota

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings lured Wisconsin's stylish quarterback Ron VanderKelen across the border Tuesday and ended three weeks of speculation by getting his signature on a pro football contract.

When VanderKelen left the field last November after Wisconsin beat Minnesota 14-9 for the Big Ten title, he had four front teeth missing and his face was a mass of bruises and blood.

But the battering he took in that game convinced Viking Coach Norm Van Brocklin that VanderKelen was his type of player.

"What I liked the most about him was his guts," Van Brocklin said with characteristic bluntness. "He really took some punishment and was better at the end of the game than at the start."

VanderKelen, 23, said he had been sought by seven or eight other pro football clubs, but chose the National Football League Vikings because they offered a greater opportunity to play, an opportunity to develop under a master quarterback and contract that was "a substantial and fair one."

VanderKelen, although scouted during the regular season, didn't have many clubs seriously bidding until after the Rose Bowl game when he passed for 401 yards as the Badgers bowed 42-37 to national champion Southern California.

WINNER — Billy Casper of Apple Valley, Calif., watches as other competitors finish in the $50,000 National Pro-Amateur Golf Championships at Pebble Beach, Calif. Casper won the tournament with a total score of 285.

ESSC Meets Trenton After Layoff

THE BASKETBALL Warriors of East Stroudsburg State College get back in action tonight at Trenton, N. J., following a layoff of a week-and-a-half.

Coach Mort Hoocheiser's hoop troops have been idle since Jan. 12 when they dropped a Pennsylvania State College Athletic Conference tilt to Millersville in another road game.

Winners of three contests in eight meetings this season, the Warriors will be out to move closer to the 500 mark with a victory tonight on the New Jersey court in a non-conference tilt.

In conference play, the Warriors have won but two in six outings so far. Cheyney and Kutztown both fell victims to East Stroudsburg, while PSCAC conquerors have been Shippensburg, West Chester, Shippensburg and Millersville.

Hoop Clinic Is Set For Saturday

A BASKETBALL clinic for high school girls, sponsored by the sophomore girls' physical education class of the East Stroudsburg State College, will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

All high schools within a 50-mile radius of the college are invited. Over 80 schools acknowledged receipt of the plan for the clinic.

The instructors and those attending the clinic will meet in the college gym and travel to Stroud Union and East Stroudsburg Area Joint High Schools for exhibitions.

The sophomore class will teach fundamentals, and other instructors will teach officiating. Sally Ehlman is the general chairman.

Knights Topple Coplay

PEN ARGYL — Roger Snyder bombed the nuts for 25 points and Dave Turtzo added 19 as the Green Knights of Pen Argyl handed Coplay's Wildcats a 70-66 trimming in an inter-divisional battle of the Lehigh-Northampton League.

Snyder shared game scoring honors with Coplay's Doug Superska who also netted 25, while Tom Tapler contributed 22 more to the losers' cause.

The game was actually won at the foul line where Pen Argyl converted 12 of 23, while Coplay hit on eight of 19. Both clubs had 29 field goals.

Coplay Leads

The Wildcats took a quick 17-12 first period lead and outscored the Knights by 20-14 in the second session as Coplay held an 11-point halftime lead at 37-26.

But Coach Frank Vail's Green Knights battled back in the second half as they pumped in 21 points in the third period while holding the visitors to 11, narrowing the gap to a mere one point at 48-47.

Behind the steady shooting of Snyder and Turtzo, Pen Argyl continued to pull away as they outscored Coplay in the final session by 23-18 to gain their fifth victory of the season against eight setbacks.

Pen Argyl also won the preliminary JV contest, 37-32.

Pocono Mountain Tops No. Pocono

SWIFTWATER — Pocono Mountain whipped North Pocono last night on the strength of 32 points contributed by the Ryan twins, John and Norb, as the Cardinals registered their eighth win against one setback.

High scorer for the game was little Dave Ruehlman, who dropped in 20 points for Pocono Mountain.

John had 17 points and brother Norb had 15 to make the Ryan total 32 tallies.

Pat-Liston Fight Set For Miami

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — After weeks of wrangling, Championship Sports, Inc., said Tuesday agreement had been reached "on all points" for the Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight title rematch in Convention Hall April 4.

The final stumbling block apparently was the demand by Liston's advisor, Jack Nilon, that the champion be paid the $207,000 held back from his purse after the first fight to guarantee the return bout.

Al Bolan of Championship Sports said Liston's money would be put up this week and Nilon "is completely satisfied with the financial arrangements."

"All we've got left is to finish the paper work," Bolan said, "and just to be on the safe side we'll submit the contracts to the Miami Beach Boxing Commission."

Nilon had insisted that $85,000 in cash be paid to Liston immediately and that the balance be placed in escrow. Earlier, he had been told he would have to sign the contract first but had refused to proceed "until I see the money."

Bolan made his statement after conferring Tuesday with Garland Cherry, Liston's lawyer who flew here from Philadelphia, and Patterson's attorney, Julius November.

Nilon also had asked that Championship Sports put up $500,000 bond guaranteeing that Liston would be paid for the rematch and that Sonny would get the same cut of the purse as Patterson, 30 per cent.

The boxing commission has demanded that the contract be submitted, with no return match clause.

Georgia Tech Hits Auburn In 69-64 Loss

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's seventh-ranked Yellow Jackets squandered a 14-point lead Tuesday night, then followed three sophomores in a frenzied comeback and defeated Auburn 69-64 in a crucial Southeastern Conference basketball game.

The victory, 13th in 14 games for Tech, lifted the Yellow Jackets into second place in the conference race with a 3-1 record. Mississippi State, ranked ninth nationally, leads the league with a 4-1 mark.

Auburn has an 11-2 season record and is 3-2 in conference play. Sophomores R. D. Craddock, Jim Caldwell and Ron Scharf scored all but one of Tech's last 17 points from a three-point deficit at 55-52 to win going away.

Pius X Drops Ninth

ROSETO — The Royals of Pius X went down to their ninth consecutive defeat of the season here last night as the invading Notre Dame Crusaders handed Pius X its worst shellacking of their winless campaign, 78-38.

Cruising out to a quick 12-0 lead behind the shooting of Joe Biasotto and Lou Schwartz, Notre Dame led all the way and was never in any trouble. Steve Ferrazano finally put the Royals on the scoreboard midway through the first period after the visitors had taken their 12-0 lead.

The first period ended with Notre Dame well in front, 28-8 and held leads of 30 points almost all the way shortly after that.

Scoring Leaders Biasotto, with 15 points, and Schwartz, with 11, were the scoring leaders for the Crusaders. The Royals' Frank Godino was the only player on his team to reach double figures, pumping in 12 points on five field goals and a brace from the foul line.

As Notre Dame substituted freely after the first period, the Crusaders still went on to tally 18 points in the second quarter while holding the Royals to 10 as the visitors led at the half by 46-18.

In the lowest scoring period of the contest, Notre Dame edged Pius X, 11-8, in the third session while the Royals were outscored in the final quarter by 21-12.

Ken Phillips also had 12 points for the winners.

Jim Padfield was the only double figure scorer for North Pocono, but he contributed heavily with 19 points.

Pocono Mountain committed 17 fouls and North Pocono committed 27. The winners hit 32 of 43 from the foul line, while North Pocono converted only 13 of their 22 free throws.

Pocono Mountain led all the way, and was only outshot in one quarter—the third—when the Northerners hit 14 to their 10. Pocono Mountain's best quarter was the second, when they scored 23 points.

Pocono Mountain also took the JV game, 31-28.

Football War Is Still On

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The American Football League charged Tuesday the rival National Football League has conspired to keep the new league out of populous areas where it could operate successfully.

The older league snapped back that the AFL had entered six of the 17 areas it said constituted the top pro football markets, and NFL attorney Gerhard A. Gessell added:

"They are competing, and they are prospering. Their commissioner says no organization in sports ever has moved so fast."

AFL attorney Warren E. Barker said the league was not prospering and its future may depend upon whether it wins its $10.8 million antitrust suit against the long-established NFL.

The exchange took place in courtroom arguments involved in an AFL appeal to the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals of a lower court decision dismissing the suit.

Knap had been considered a shoo-in for the job and the Utah State board of trustees said they didn't consider anyone else.

The board announced its decision at a meeting in Salt Lake City.

Knap came to Utah State with Ralston in 1959 after compiling a high school coaching record in Idaho and California of 109 victories, 22 defeats and 6 ties.

Signs Up With Angels

Belinsky's Bright Light Days Over, He Declares

By Mike Rathet Associated Press Sports Writer

THERE are some who claim Bo Belinsky's best pitch is the one he makes off the field.

Belinsky, who ran into more trouble in his first season in major league baseball than Napoleon did at Waterloo, insists it's a screwball.

He says it without cracking a smile. Apparently he is going to get a chance to prove it one way or another during the 1963 season with the Los Angeles Angels, who signed him Tuesday with this guarded accolade from General Manager Fred Haney:

"He could become one of the game's fine pitchers. It's strictly up to him. He has great ability and if he concentrates on baseball, he can become a great asset to the club, to baseball and to himself."

Belinsky, who came to the majors more celebrated as a pool shark than a pitcher and for a

Your Income Tax 11: Class Of Returns

3 Of 4 Returns Offer Special Benefits

EDITOR'S NOTE: A lot of Americans pay more tax than they have to because they don't understand the four special classes of tax returns. Here, in the second of five special articles, is an explanation of how these classes work and what they're for.

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are four separate classes of tax returns — three of them offering special benefits.

Obviously, it may pay you to understand the differences among the four classes. It's a fact that many Americans pay higher-than-necessary taxes because they don't understand what's involved here.

These are the four classes: The separate return, the regular joint return, the joint return for those recently widowed and the special return for those qualifying as head of a household.

The biggest money saver is the joint return, which may be filed by any couple married as of last Dec. 31—even those married at one minute to midnight on that day. However, those who were divorced or legally separated before the end of the year are considered single for the entire year and cannot file a joint return. If your husband or wife died during 1962, however, you still may file a joint return and claim a $600 exemption for your deceased spouse.

In almost every case, the joint return will result in a lower tax. If you're in doubt about your own situation, figure your tax both ways — and choose the method that produces the lowest tax.

A few married couples cannot file a joint return. This is true if husband and wife use different tax years, as when one uses a fiscal year and the other uses the calendar year. Separate returns also must be filed if either husband or wife was a nonresident alien at any time during 1962. However, one or the other still may be eligible to file a head of household return.

Whenever a husband and wife file separately, they must agree to follow the same practice by either itemizing deductions or claiming the standard deduction. In states having community property laws, each must report one-half of their combined community income. They also must divide any deductions paid from community funds. Each lists his own exemptions and reports any income not classed as community income.

If your husband or wife died during 1960 or 1961, you may file the surviving spouse type of return provided you meet these requirements:

1. You were entitled to file jointly with your deceased spouse at the time of death and have not remarried.
2. Since your spouse's death, you have furnished more than half the maintenance of your home, which is the principal living place of your child or stepchild for whom you can claim a dependency exemption.

You cannot claim an exemption for your late husband or wife in such cases, but you calculate your tax by using the same schedule as for a joint return.

The head of household return is for single, widowed, divorced or legally separated persons who maintain a household for certain relatives.

Specific Requirements

Here are the specific requirements:

1. You must furnish more than half the cost of maintaining a home which is the principal residence of both you and your unmarried child, stepchild or grandchild, whether or not a dependent of yours, or any other relative whom you may claim as a dependent.
2. Or you must pay more than half the cost of maintaining a household for your father or mother, if either qualifies as your dependent.

The IRS instruction booklets, mailed to most homes early in January, list the special tax rates for heads of households.
